Government of Canada has removed COVID-19 testing requirement for air travelers arriving from the People's Republic of China, Hong Kong or Macao

Starting on March 17, 2023, air travelers to Canada on flights originating from the People's Republic of China, Hong Kong or Macao will no longer be required to provide evidence of a COVID-19 test result before boarding.

The Public Health Agency of Canada continues to recommend that individuals wear well-constructed and well-fitted masks during their travel on planes, in airports, or other crowded indoor settings and should not travel if they have symptoms of COVID-19.

Individuals in Canada who plan to travel abroad should complete a COVID-19 vaccine series along with any additional recommended doses in Canada, at least 14 days before travelling.
